CHRISTMAS TIME

This is the most wonderful time of the year,
Houses are complete with lights and gifts
The Christmas tree is soaring and decorated
And with snowmen guarding the streets
Family members are uniting for lunch,
This season is filled with happiness.
But this is only what I hear.
What I see is different.
This I can see -
The sunlight blinding during the day
And the breeze freezing during the night,
While I lie in bed trying to warm myself
Under the thin bedspread,
I see damp roads adorned with dried leaves
While I silently wish for the beautifully white snow,
My home is plain and undecorated
While my eyes avoid the fancy decorations at the store,
My Christmas tree is small and almost bare
With all the decorations I received with the tree,
Instead of the snowmen in Christmas movies
I see lampposts out of order,
And as I look outside the window overlooking the empty street
There are no family members rushing though the gate
Only dogs and cats.
Is this my Christmas?
There are a few seconds left before Christmas
And this time I believe there is magic in the air,

The darkness soars across the sky
Taking in all the sadness and pain
The stars are the lights to my Christmas tree
The tree that my windows overlook
The tree is not tall nor is it exceptional
But it is a gift to the man sleeping underneath
And he has no place to go,
And the tree is decorated with nests
Of birds that seek its comfort on this night
And every other night
There may not be a snowman of happiness
But I hold memories warm enough to melt all the snow
That will not fall on the street
Overlooked by my windows,
My family is right here
At home and in my heart
My heart holds those I loved and lost,
They are there because I have forgiven them
And melted their snow in my life,
But left the water to remind myself of the hurt,
My heart holds those who loved and stayed
This is my family
And they don't come around only on Christmas.
This is my Christmas
And it has just begun.
